REFUSE PAYMENT OF WATER BILLS

THE CITY COUNCIL IS UNABLE TO UNDERSTAND RATE
CHARGED BY THE GREENCASTLE
WATER COMPANY, WHICH PRESENTED TWO BILLS FOR SERVICE OF THE PAST FEW MONTHS—FINANCE COMMIT-TEE WILL INVESTIGATE MAT-TER.

STATEMENT FROM GAS CO.

The water bills presented to the city council for collection by the Greencastle Water company were turned down by the council at a meeting in the council chamber Tuesday evening. The finance board recommended that the bill be stricken from the claim ordinance, because of the fact that the rate charged by the water company was not given on the bills presented to the city. The amount of the water bill which was presented to the council was much greater than those of former months, on account of the increase of the rates ordered by the Public Utility Commission of the state in a recent ruling.

From October 1st, 1914, until December 10th, 1914, 406,236 gallons of water were used at the public watering troughs on north Jackson street, Franklin street, the engine house at the corner of Indiana and Walnut streets and on Broadway street in south Greencastle. The bill for this amount of water was $90.74. From December 10 to January 10th, 154,807 gallons of water was used and this amounted to $38.22. The exact increase in the average cost of water per month is not known, but the amount is much greater. The raise will mean much to the city. The finance board will investigate the matter and ask that a new bill be made out and presented to the council.

A statement of the total output of gas by the Greencastle Gas company during the year 1914, was made to the council by J. G. Martin, manager of company, Tuesday evening. The statement is as follows:

Total sales for year 8,066,660 cu. ft.
Gas unaccounted for 639,600 cu. ft.

Gas delivered to main 8,706,200 cu. ft.

The question of whether or not Clyde Ballard, a man who came here from Valparaiso several days ago would be allowed to operate a popcorn wagon on the streets of the city without paying license, came before the council. The man claims he is making his home in Greencastle and will remain here. A city ordinance provides that $5 a day be paid for license to a transient, but Ballard claims he is a resident of the city. No action was taken in the matter.

Councilman Frank Allen, chairman of a committee appointed to go before the county commissioners several days ago and discuss the plan of keeping the toilet rooms of the court house open at night, made a report to the council. He stated that the committee representing the council refused to aid the commissioners in bearing the expenses of keeping the toilet rooms open. The commissioner's dropped the matter and will not consider keeping the rooms open at night.

A permit was granted Mrs. Serilda Huffman to run a drain pipe from a down spout on her house on Indiana street, under the sidewalk to the gutter in front of her home. Henry Miles was given permission to cut a tree in front of his home on Depot street. He was also granted a permit to cut a tree at the rear of the lot owned by Frank Kauble on Howard street.

JOHN HOFFNER ASKS FOR DIVORCE FROM HIS WIFE

John E. Hoffner of this city, chief dispatcher for the T. H. I. & E. Traction company, filed suit in the Putnam Circuit Court today through his attorneys, Moore & Moore, asking for a divorce from his wife, Selina Hoffner, on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment and abandonment.

Mr. Hoffner claims that after four or five years of married life, the wife began to manifest very quarrelsome and dissatisfied actions toward him and that she recently moved to Lebanon and refused to live with him. Mr. Hoffner alleges that he and his family moved to this city from Lebanon in 1912, and that shortly after their arrival here, Mrs. Hoffner became dissatisfied with the home he had provided for the family and asked that they move to a cottage, the rent for which would be beyond his means. When he refused to do this he was the subject of much abuse, according to the complaint. Mr. Hoffner alleges that his wife accused him of illicit relations with other women and often told him that she wished he was dead. He claims that she had made the assertion that she intended to raise her children and teach them to despise him. Other allegations made by Mr. Hoffner are that the wife moved back to Lebanon without his consent and had circulated reports that he had driven her from his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoffner formerly resided on south Indiana street. They have two daughters who are of age and married. Mrs. Hoffner is now in Lebanon.

DEATH CLAIMS ROBERT CROW

END COMES TO PROMINENT PUT-
NAM COUNTY STOCK DEALER
AND FARMER AT HIS HOME
JUST NORTHEAST OF TOWN
FOLLOWING A SHORT ILLNESS
OF PNEUMONIA.

HAD BEEN ILL A WEEK

The death of Robert Crow, age 51, one of Putnam county's most prominent stock dealers and farmers, occurred at his home just northeast of Greencastle this morning at 9 o'clock, following a short illness of pneumonia. Mr. Crow had been ill for only a week, but his condition had been serious from the time his illness began.

Several months ago Mr. Crow met with a serious accident when he was crushed between two traction cars in Terre Haute. He was confined to the hospital and to his home for weeks and during part of his illness his life was despaired of by his relatives and friends.

Finally, however, he overcame the effects of his injuries sufficient to be out and around but his health was greatly impaired and when pneumonia developed he was not able to withstand it.

Beside his sister, Miss Fannie Crow, who has made her home on the farm, he leaves four other sisters, Mrs. P. K. Dobyns of Franklin, Mrs. R. L. Westover of Okmulgee, Okla., Mrs. J. H. Hamilton of Artesian, S. D., and Mrs. Lizzie Hamilton of Greencastle. Two brothers, E. H. Crow and Hanson Crow, of Kansas, survive.

Miss Fannie Crow, who had been visiting her sister in Franklin, was called home yesterday by the serious illness of her brother. Dr. and Mrs. P. K. Dobyns of Franklin were with Mr. Crow during the greater part of his illness.

D. V. Etcheson, of Bainbridge, former trustee of Monroe township, was here today.

START ON $18,000 ROAD REPAIR JOB

ALLEN & SWEET BEGIN WORK
REPAIRING THE CRAWFORDS-
VILLE PIKE FROM THE MONON
TRACKS TO THE WATER
WORKS HILL—BRIDGE SPAN
INCLUDED IN CONTRACT.

BINDER WILL BE USED

Work on the repair of the Crawfordsville Pike, from the Monon tracks to the Water Works hill, was begun by Allen & Sweet, the road contractors, this morning. The repair which includes re-grading, re-building and bridging will cost $18,000.

The road will be surfaced with a binder and will, when completed, be one of the best pieces of road in the county. Included in the contract is an 80-foot span to the wooden bridge, which crosses Walnut creek at the Water Works pumping station. The extra span will be built to the north end of the bridge to prevent any further flood damage from Walnut creek during high water.

Several times the creek has washed away several hundred feet of the road north of the bridge, causing hundreds of dollars to be expended in the repair of the road. With the new bridge span, this excess of water will be taken care of and no more wash-outs will occur.

The road to be improved probably is the most used road in the county. As a main trunk road from the north part of the county it gets most of the travel north and south, from and to Greencastle.

The heaviest hauling which goes over it, however, is the coal hauling to the Water Works station. All the coal used at the station is hauled from Greencastle, one or two teams working every day in hauling the coal. Then virtually all of the gravel hauled to Greencastle comes over this road. Thousands of loads of gravel are hauled over it each year. Much log hauling, also, is done on this road.

Man years ago the road was built of stone but the heavy hauling has completely ruined it and now it is perhaps the worst short piece of road in the county.

Under the specifications the road is to be re-graded, several small hills being cut out and hollows filled in. The road will be built of stone with a surface binder. The specifications call for the same binder which was used last fall in repairing the Cloverdale pike but an effort will be made to have this specification changed so that tarvia can be used for a binder. The general impression is that tarvia makes a much better binder than the one used on the south road.

The county has asked the city to repair the short piece of this road from the Monon tracks to the city limits, but the city refused to do so. The county, rather than see this short piece of road remain in the present dilapidated condition, will rebuild this short piece itself. Work was begun this morning at the Monon tracks. The first work done will be on the grade. It is hoped to get the grade completed by the time the good weather sets in and then the work can be rushed to completion. Work on the bridge has already begun.

George Gardner has been appointed as superintendent of construction of the new road.

INSURANCE MEN IN SLIGHT "AXLE-DENT"

Mike Ogle, of the Central Trust Co., and an insurance agent who was here Tuesday to look after some business met with a slight "axle-dent" near Hamrick Station, just south of Greencastle Tuesday morning. The men were driving south in a storm buggy, when the axle of their buggy suddenly broke. The men were thrown through the front of the storm buggy, but luckily the horse did not attempt to run. The only injuries were some slight bruises and cuts. After the accident the two men telephoned to Greencastle for a new rig and continued their trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Stoner and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Beemer will go to Indianapolis this evening to see "The Polles" at English's.

ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD.

Did His Best

"I never knew before how funny pa can be," said the eldest Miss Fibbert, after the guests had departed.

"Quite a revelation!" declared Mrs. Fibbert. "He ought to bring his guests oftener. It is delightful to see your father so good-natured and droll!"

"And the adventures pa has had!" exclaimed the youngest Miss Fibbert. "And the lies he told!" cried Uncle Dick. "I didn't know Bob could grind them out impromptu like that. I would have thought it would require time to polish 'em up."

"Father must have been quite a romantic young man!" mused the second Miss Fibbert.

"Oh, he was!" said Uncle Dick, with a grin. "That was pretty good where he and the other young man swapped girls. I admired that very much. It sounded good to me. It was just a little bit like your father, too. He fell in love with his sweetheart's sister, and swapped her off with the sister's young man."

"And it was just like two girls of spirit to give them both the bounce!" put in the eldest Miss Fibbert.

"Your father used to be so fickle—" "Will you shut up?" howled Fibbert. "You people make me tired. Why should you rake up all these horrible details of the past? I know I said a lot of things on the spur of the moment for my guests' entertainment, but hanged if I think it's right for you to rehearse them in this cold-blooded way! I did the best I could!"

"You did mighty well!" said Uncle Dick, admiringly. "I started to count and classify them—lies, confounded lies and true lies."

"Those where the truth would have been funnier I characterized as lies. They were inexcusable—not artistic, not anything. There were seven of them. Of the confounded lies—the kind where the truth was exaggerated to good advantage, the kind I admirably characterize as confounded lies—there were thirty-seven. The true lies—those which might just as well have happened as not—were three in number. It wasn't your fault that they didn't happen. They are the highest form of self-expression."

"Quite a high score, old man! Any one who can tell a true lie that is refreshing and bright is a credit to humanity. You did remarkably well, and we are all proud of you!"

Agitator—Fellow citizens, we have lost our rights—

Voice (from rear)—Why don't you advertise?

Crude Work

"I should regret very much to hear that anybody has ever offered money for political influence."

"Yes," answered Mr. Graftwell, "your hearing of it would indicate very crude work on somebody's part."

Sleeping Cake

"Cake can sleep, can't it?" asked a boy of his father.

"No, my son; have you lost your senses?"

"Yes, it can sleep, too, for haven't you heard of ginger's naps?"

Where to Begin

Mrs. Highmind—I think it's a great pity that one can't find a newspaper that isn't filled with all sorts of horrible crime. We ought to have an organization to prevent such matter being printed.

Philosopher—Would it not be better to have an organization to prevent such horrible crimes from being committed?

Should Beat Faster Than

"You know it is stated that man's heart beats 92,160 times a day," said the young man.

"Every day?" asked the sweet young thing.

"Yes, every day."

"Well, if a young man's heart didn't beat more times than that the day he proposed marriage I'd consider him a pretty cold proposition."

Has Quit Worrying

"When I first came to Washington," remarked Senator Sorgum, "I was afraid I could not satisfy my constituents."

"And now?"

"Now I'm sure of it."

Kings Classified

"A king hasn't as much real power as some of the officials in a great republic."

"Of course," replied Sorgum, "you are talking about one of those hereditary monarchs they have abroad. You don't mean a regular oil king or a king of finiance."

Rinks—"That girl in the green wig looks good enough to eat!"

Jinks—"You must be eating like a horse!"

Look well to their record. What they have done many times in years gone by is the best guarantee of future results. Anyone with a bad back; any reader suffering from urinary troubles, from kidney ills, should find comforting words in the following statement:

Mrs. Cora Sanders, Tennessee St., Danville, Ind., says: "I had terrible backaches and pains in the top and back part of my head. Learning of Doan's Kidney Pills, I began using them. In a few days the relief they brought convinced me that they were a good remedy. The kidney secretions became natural and my back was stronger."

Re-Endorsement.

On June 6th, 1912, Mrs. Sanders said: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in my family, and we have found them to be a good remedy for kidney trouble. I am glad to confirm my previous statement recommending them."

A Better Market

The man whose farm is small must overlook no chance to market every product to the best advantage to increase his income in every possible way. On such a farm a comparatively small amount of live stock will be kept and time is plenty to go to extra pains in marketing. If a small flock of sheep is kept and the farmer knows well how to dress a lamb, and it is not hard to learn, he can sell direct to consumers in the city to the great advantage of all parties concerned. Four city families who like and use mutton can easily handle a 50-pound carcass every two or three weeks, and will be mighty glad to do so if they can be put in touch with a farmer who will supply them at a fair price. The carcass should be shipped to one address to save shipping charges. It should not be difficult to work up such a market through a city acquaintance or a small advertisement in a city paper, and if fairness and judgment are used the trade can be kept up through the "inter months when the fresh carcasses can be shipped without danger of spoiling, with the farmer securing a very decent price for his lambs, a better price than he could get at home, and the consumers getting better lamb at a lower price than they can buy in the retail markets of the city. It is worth looking into, the matter.

Some farmers seem to be always ready to sell when the price is best. Wonder if they study the market?

If there is plenty of clean straw in the scratching shed, the hens will have clean feet before they go to the nest. Clean straw means clean eggs.

ROYALTY BY BREVET

Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Company.

By CLARENCE HERBERT NEW

"Pardon, highness. The private reception to visiting royalty will be in fifteen minutes, in the Green Drawing Room."

Ames turned to the uniformed gentleman-in-waiting, at his elbow, with a quiet glance that seemed to ask further information. It was a cardinal principle with him to "stand pat" under most circumstances—and the air of inborn dignity which was part of the man emphasized the impression of distinction he created wherever he went.

"If I can be of service to your highness in any way? continued the gentleman-in-waiting deferentially. "I notice you are in half mufti—"

"Ah, yes!"

Ames had accompanied his old friend, the ambassador, to the palace, and at this suggestion, had pinned upon his evening coat some of the orders conferred upon him by appreciative governments for services in the line of engineering.

"I think I can supply your highness with a cordon, if you will step into our robing-closet for a moment."

The gentleman-in-waiting was now quite certain that he had guessed the other's identity.

"Really, I'm under obligations to you, sir."

"Count Balfe, prince—very much at your service, I assure you. Step this way, please!"

The count led him to a small room, off the main corridor, devoted to the use of members of the royal household. Here, producing a broad purple sash of watered silk, he adjusted it across Ames' shirt bosom, pinning the ends under the waistcoat.

Next, leading him to a smaller, private corridor, the count pointed to a doorway at the further end, with brief instructions and expressions of pleasure at being of assistance to royalty in need.

"Queer sensation, this—being a prince of the blood for an hour or so," Ames thought to himself as he walked slowly down the passage. "But this is good fun. I suppose they'll hardly put me in the castle for another man's blunder, and I'll get out of it somehow, without actually intruding upon the royal family party."

Outwardly, he was the personification of dignified ease. Half way down the corridor a door opened—and a lady whose regal appearance justified his hasty surmise, stepped from it hesitatingly. She was more than beautiful, in a diaphanous costume of India silk. Nestling in the coils of her hair was a tiara of superb diamonds.

"Why, prince! She had come to him with outstretched hands. "Isn't this a little unexpected? I fancied you were abroad!"

"Why—er—fact is, I've only been in town for a day or two—er—princess."

"Dear me, how very formal we are, your highness!" Daintily picking up her skirts, she swept him a low courtesy. "Come let us be ourselves again. Tell me some of your adventures in the forgotten corners of the world."

When Ames chose, he was an excellent talker. It was only after he had been absorbedly interested in the man and what he said for several minutes, that she noticed with a start, that they were alone in the corridor—and that every one else seemed to have entered the reception room.

"I suppose, really, we should be going in with the rest," she said, "though I'll confess to a distaste for these family affairs before the public reception."

"Really! Now that's odd. I don't care for them myself. Wonder if we couldn't stay at the back of the crowd and presently slip out again without going up the line."

She looked up at him with a rough dimple in her cheek.

"That would hardly be courteous to—er—Cousin Rudolph, would it? Frankly, though, I wish we could. I can't explain it, but I always feel horribly nervous at being announced by a court chamberlain, and having all my dear relatives whispering comments upon my gown or my hair, as I go up to the receiving party."

A few moments later, he decided that this remark of the princess was really the honest truth. As they stood together at the rear of the room, replying here and there to friendly, though puzzled nods, she grew so pale that he feared she was going to faint. Presently she whispered:

"I really must retire, somehow, without attracting notice, if I can. The air is stifling!"

Choosing a moment when all eyes were turned toward the king and queen, as they greeted Carlos of Portugal, Ames quietly drew the portiere aside and led her into the corridor. She sank down upon a divan and whispered:

"That was very good of you, prince! I shall be all right in a moment or two; I think it was the heat. Shall you see me again soon? Why, of course! You've been away so long that we have much to say to each other. I shall be at Walderssee House tomorrow evening. You are coming? Ah, I see you have noticed my locket! Isn't it a dear? Castellucci begged me for a sitting, and then presented me with the miniature after finishing his study in oils. It flatters me outrageously, of course, but it is a beautiful specimen of his work. Let you take it? What do you wish to do with it? Oh, I couldn't!"

I don't mind lending it to you for a while, if you'll promise to return it. Now, I must go. Thanks ever so much for getting me out of that horrid room. Ah, but you mustn't. He had taken her hand, and was pressing his lips to it. "I thought you had forgotten the old days, prince. We are older and wiser now, are we not? Au revoir!"

As she disappeared, Ames felt as if he were in a dream. How he found his way back to the robing closet, left the purple cordon, and made his escape from the palace without attracting attention to his eccentric behavior, he never knew.

Next morning, while riding in the park with the ambassador, they passed a victoria in which the princess was sitting with a fine-looking elderly man, and two other ladies.

"By jove, that's a beautiful girl, Ames. Who is she?"

"The Princess Sophie."

In their talk the evening before, the name had slipped from her unconsciously; and it seemed to fit the miniature in his pocket.

"Princess, eh? Wonder how Thurbert happens to be of the party? That was he in the victoria with her—the millionaire banker of New York, you know. And how in the name of all that's good do you happen to be favored with her acquaintance, John?"

That was a very pretty smile she gave you!"

As the ambassador was among the invited guests at Walderssee House that evening, Ames had no difficulty in accompanying him. Presently he discovered his princess, surrounded by a knot of admirers. As he approached, she stepped from the group—a smile of pleased recognition dimpling her face:

"Ah, prince! In mufti? You certainly have acquired democratic ideas in your travels. I don't know whether the count will feel complimented or not. Now, all you other men go and talk to some one else for a while. I have a little quarrel to make up with the prince." Her request, and the title she gave him, were sufficient; the others courteously bowed and left them together.

"A quarrel, princess? Why—"

"That's just it. I'm not a princess at all! And I was in such an embarrassing position last evening that I simply couldn't explain to you. I'm just plain Sophie Thurbert, of New York. Royal American blood, perhaps—if you admit the existence of such a thing; but no tincture of the European article. Dear old short-sighted Countess von Elchow left me in the royal robing-room, by a stupid mistake, and the ladies-in-waiting gave me instructions that I couldn't well avoid following—until you came to my rescue. After that I had to play up to the situation as best I could to get out of it without disgracing myself. Now, I suppose you will be pleased to return my locket—and forget all about it." Ames' face cleared; he began to laugh from sheer happiness. "Really, prince, I suppose it is amusing to you, but—"

"Wait." He gently laid his fingers upon her arm. "Since last evening you have been the Princess Sophie to me—and you always will be. You took me for a royal highness because I was a victim of circumstances, like yourself. I am John Ames, of Philadelphia—an engineer with some little record of accomplishment, perhaps, but nothing more. And if you ever get that locket back, I'm afraid you'll have to take me with it."

He was looking into her face as no man had ever looked before—and though she trembled a little with the consciousness of what she saw in his eyes, she tried for a second to fence.

"But suppose that I have already made other arrangements?"

"Ah, princess, then I'll—but you haven't! You can't look me in the face and say you have! Here comes our ambassador—shall I tell him I have won a princess?"

She looked up demurely.

"You may tell him the idea that Philadelphia is slow is erroneous."

ODD ELEPHANT FACTS

The elephant has three sets of teeth, four in each jaw, but only eight of the teeth are in action at one time. The other two sets are reserved only coming into use when the first ones are worn out.

The elephant's trunk, it is asserted by some scientists, is the most wonderful organ in all nature. One scientist says that it contains 40,000 muscles; and so great is its mechanism that it can pick up almost anything from a toothpick to a good-sized dog.

The elephant is the largest of all extant land animals, and is said to be second only to the dog in intelligence; but the dog comes from a thousand generations of domesticated stock. So the elephant deserves a great deal of credit for quickness in surpassing almost any other animal.

The ivory of the elephant's tusks is the most resilient substance known. An ivory ball will rebound higher than a solid rubber one; that is why the best billiard balls are made of this substance, and to obtain it the elephant is ruthlessly hunted and slain.

BIG GERMAN GUNS HURL SHOT MILES

Siege Pieces That Smashed Antwerp Pointed Almost Perpendicularly.

AIM FROM CAPTIVE BALLOONS

Shrieking of Shells Heard for 20 Seconds After Discharge of Enormous Mortars.

A correspondent of the Muenchener Neueste Nachrichten gives some interesting details about the famous German 16-inch siege guns that battered Antwerp into surrender and which have destroyed every fort against which they have been directed. He describes the successful bombardment of the French fort of Manonville, near the German border.

"The bore of these giants is a full 42 centimeters. Just as soon as the Germans began their advance against the fort of Manonville, two of these huge mortars were firmly mounted at a distance of some six miles from the fort. It was impossible for those who served the guns to see the objects at which they aimed, since a number of hills intervened. But what the Germans cannot see they can calculate. They were provided with detail maps, giving the exact distance in yards of various features of the fortifications from any given point. But even these maps were not the sole reliance of the gunners. Captive balloons were used with these guns to assist in the direction of their fire.

"As soon as the balloon had mounted the firing began. Those in the basket had powerful glasses to observe the effect of every shot, and a necessary correction of the range was promptly signalled to the artillery below. It only required a few shots before every one struck the bull's-eye.

"At the beginning of the bombardment only one of the mortars was in action, firing a shot every 10 minutes. Soon the second one chimed in and the terrible duet continued at five-minute intervals.

"What an awful concert! Those standing near had the feeling that the mere sound would send them sprawling. The whole bombardment occupied one and one-half days. But throughout that time only 120 shots were fired and these sufficed to force the surrender of Manonville.

"It was interesting to observe the barrels of the guns. They were pointed almost perpendicularly into the air. It appeared as though they were trying to rend asunder the blue of the firmament. For 20 seconds after the shot was fired could be heard the shrieking and whistling of the charge as it hurtled through the air along a line that would have carried it well over Mont Blanc.

"On the next day, when the 740 prisoners were transferred from the fort to be sent to Germany as prisoners of war, the first question put by the commandant of the fort was: 'Of what caliber were the shots which you fired during the last day of the bombardment?'

"He was very greatly astonished to learn about the new guns and to learn that their fire had been directed from such a distance. He described the astonishment of the garrison when the bombardment of the gun turrets which had been pronounced impregnable were split apart like cardboard by a shot from an invisible enemy."

BED SPRINGS CATCH WIRELESS MESSAGES

New York Inventor Has Novel Method of Getting Waves from Nearby Stations in His Room.

There are many different kinds of wire receivers, or antennae, to catch the mysterious electric waves which carry wireless messages through space. Probably the most novel method is that used by C. H. Flandreau, of Peekskill, N. Y., who has found that the springs of his bed serve as excellent antennae. He gives the following account of his experiments:

"My room is in the second story of the house, and by using the wire bed springs as antennae I can easily read the signals sent out every night by the wireless station at Sayville, N. Y., although they are not by any means so loud as when I use my outdoor antennae, which are forty feet above ground, sixty feet long and consist of four wires on spreaders, the wires being two feet apart.

"The bed spring antennae are best for use with nearby, high-power stations. Sayville is about fifty miles from Peekskill. With my outdoor antennae I continually hear the Arlington (Va.) naval station when it sends out the correct time signals at 11:55 a. m. and at 9:55 p. m.; also the weather reports and messages from Brooklyn navy yards, New London, Conn., Cape Cod and others, including amateur stations too numerous to mention.

"I have an all-around good apparatus. I hold a station license and an operator's license, both issued by the United States government."

In a new incubator the eggs are so supported that the movement of a lever turns all of them at once the proper distance to produce the best results.

Recognized Advantages.

You will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has recognized advantages over most medicines in use for coughs and colds. It does not suppress a cough but loosens and relieves it. It aids expectoration and opens the secretions, which enables the system to throw off a cold. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia. It contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by all others.

THE MEAT BILL.

Knowledge as an Aid to Economical Buying.

Nowhere will a young housekeeper show her ignorance more than at the butcher's. A little knowledge goes a long way in a market, and the woman who knows what to ask for saves 10 per cent on her meat bill.

Suppose she asks for veal, unless she is able to specify the cut she is sure to be given the loin or filet, where often a less expensive cut would serve the need. Generally, in cutting up veal the hindquarter is divided into loin and leg, and the forequarter is divided into breast, neck and shoulder. From the hindquarter comes: The loin, the choicest cuts for roasts and chops; filet, used for roasts and cutlets; chump end of loin, for roasts and chops; hind-knuckle, for stew and potpie.

From the forequarter comes: Neck, best end for roasts, steaks, and chops; breast, best for roasting, steaks and chops; bladebone, for pot roasts and baked dishes; fore-knuckle, used for soups and stews; breast, brisket end used for baking, stews, and potpie; neck, serag end used for stews, broth, meat pie, etc.

If you are buying pork the most generally used cuts are leg, used for smoked hams, roasts, and corned pork; hind loin, roasts, chops and baked dishes; fore loin or ribs, used for roasts, baking and chops; spare ribs, chops, steaks and roasts; shoulder, roasts and corned pork; brisket and flank, used for pickling in salt and for smoked hams; mutton, leg for roasts and boiling; shoulder, for baked dishes and roasts; loin, for roasts and chops (saddle and double loin); chump-end of loin, for roasts and chops; rib chops, for French chops and choice stews; breast, for roasts, baked dishes, steaks and chops, and neck for cutlets, stews and meat pies.

These lists should provide at least a working vocabulary for the young housekeeper.

PASTOR ENTERTAINED.

A Delicate Point and Enlightenment Wanted From Etiquette Expert.

"About the hardest problem I have had to solve in my brief housekeeping career," said the woman, "is what to do with the pastor when he calls on the servant girl. We have a good girl. She is a regular attendant at a chapel in the neighborhood. Every so often the pastor or his assistant in his rounds of the parish calls on her.

"I am a heathen myself in the matter of religious observances, nevertheless I know what is due to gentlemen of the cloth. The best room about the house should be at the disposal of one's spiritual adviser always. Should Lucy, then, receive her guest in the parlor, or should they compromise on the dining room? The kitchen as a place for entertaining the minister is quite out of the question.

"So far, the ministers calling at my house have been spared even the indignity of a dining room reception. I have taken to the back regions myself while Lucy held forth in the parlor. I know other women with churchgoing maids who are equally considerate. Altogether this is a delicate point on which we need some enlightenment from the etiquette experts."

DISRUPTION OF GOOD HABITS.

Even This is Wise, Occasionally, for Both Men and Women.

Comfort is only another term for habit. The older we grow the more "set" we become, until any break in the routine of existence spells discomfort. One's slippers must be beside the bed and one's clothing disposed on the same hooks and chairs day after day; the water for shaving must be of the right temperature; breakfast is wanted when it is wanted, and so through the 24 hours.

Now, travel disarranges this routine, therefore it is well to travel—more or less; to fish for slippers in the welter of a valise's contents, to shave with cold water, to breakfast at some one else's convenience, and, in general, to move along the line of most resistance. Even good habits need disrupting, now and then, for the pursuit of comfort leads to selfishness and inconsiderateness, as the paths of glory lead but to the grave.

Spare the Horses.

A cavalry sergeant had endured the stupidity of a recruit for many days. One day the "rookie" was thus greeted when he had violated the sergeant's orders:

"Don't ever come at the horses from behind without speakin' to them!" exclaimed the sergeant. "They'll be kicking that thick head of yours; then the first thing you know there'll be a lot of lame horses in the squadron."—Illustrated Bits.

The Earth's Population.

It has been estimated that the earth can maintain a population of 6,000,000,000, total which will be reached about the year 2100 at the present rate of increase.

"Sweet Alice" Outgrown.

Do you remember Sweet Alice, who wept with delight when Ben Bolt gave her a smile and trembled with fear at his frown? Women are not built that way nowadays.

Would you count your true friends? Fall into misfortune!—Napoleon.

CONTINUE PINE PATTERNS

Makers Like Soft Wood Even Though High Priced

In spite of the advance in prices of material and the introduction of cheaper kinds of lumber, pine still retains its position as the leading wood used in the making of patterns, and justly so, for it is soft but not brittle, works nicely under the hand and machine tools, and is not easily affected by atmospheric conditions. These desirable qualities, however, are not characteristic of all pine nor of all boards sawn from the same log.

Some boards may possess all these qualities and others not one. The selecting of suitable pine for pattern work should be entrusted to an expert and not left to the judgment of the lumber dealer.

One of the first things to be considered is that the lumber must be perfectly dry, as no matter how good the quality may be, if it has not been kiln or season dried, the wood is of no value in patternmaking. The boards should be carefully examined on both sides to see that they are free from sap and sap wood, knots, worn eaten holes, wind shakes, and fancy grain, somewhat similar to quarter-sawn oak.—Popular Mechanics.

"The Workmanship of Macbeth"

Suppose that Shakespeare as a workman had never improved on what Marlowe taught. Suppose, having to make Macbeth choose evil for good, he had introduced Satan, definite, incarnate, as Marlowe did; suppose he had made the man assign his soul, by deed of gift, on a piece of parchment and sign it with his blood, as Marlowe made Faustus do. What sort of play would "Macbeth" be?

But we know, and Shakespeare has helped to teach us, that the very soul of horror lies in the vague, the impalpable; that nothing in the world or out of it can so daunt and cow us as the dread of we know not what. Of darkness, again—of such darkness as this tragedy is cast in—that its menace lies in suggestion of the hooded eye watching us, the hand feeling to clutch us by the hair. No, Shakespeare knew what he was about when he left his witches vague.

Let us pause here, on the brink of the deed, and summarize:

1. Shakespeare, as artificer of this play, meant the witches with their suggestions to be of capital importance.

2. Shakespeare, as a workman, purposely left vague the extent of their influence; purposely left vague the proportions their influence and Macbeth's own guilty promptings, his own acceptance of the hallucination, contribute to persuade him; vague as the penumbra about him in which—for he is a man of imagination—he sees that visionary dagger. For (let us remember) it is not on Macbeth alone that this horrible dubiety has to be produced; but on us also, seated in the audience. We see what he does not, and yearn to warn him; but we also see what he sees—Banquo's ghost, for example—and understand why he doubts.

3. As witchcraft implies a direct reversal of the moral order, so the slight and remembrance of the witches, with the strange fulfillment of the Second Witch's prophecy, constantly impose the hallucination upon him—"Fair is foul, and foul is fair." "Evil, be thou my good."—Sir Arthur Quiller Couch, in The North American Review.

Woes of Literature

"Ask anyone you chance to meet on the street what he is doing and he will, in nine cases out of ten, tell you he is writing a play," said Eugene Walter, author of several successes. "Everyone has joined the play writing handicap now. I asked a motorman on the street car the other day how his play was getting on and he said:

"I've got it all finished except that climax of the last act. Now, in the second act, I have the hero—"

"Forty-second street," yelled the conductor, and I had to get off the car just as I was about to hear how the hero saved the girl in the second act.

All of which reminds me of something I heard an amateur novelist say one time in Cincinnati. I met this young newspaper man. He, like nine-tenths of all other newspaper men, was a "bug" on fiction. He had the script of a novel tucked under his arm.

"How are you making out?" he asked.

"Rotten," he answered.

"What's the trouble?"

"Nothing," he went on, "only the trouble is nowadays that as novelists hatch a plot, spend a lot of time writing it and then find that our plot has been used as a short story by the late O. Henry."

"Wonderful" Hens

"Speaking of hens," said an American traveler, "reminds me of an old hen my dad had on a farm in North Dakota. She would hatch out a lemon. Why, one day she sat on a piece of ice and hatched out two quarts of hot water."

"That doesn't come up to a club-footed hen my old mother once had," said one of his hearers. "They had been feeding her by mistake on sawdust instead of oatmeal. Well, she laid twelve eggs and sat on them, and when they were hatched eleven of the chickens had wooden legs and the twelfth was a woodpecker."

"We won't discharge you, Mr. Perkins," said the manager. "We shall allow you to tender your resignation."

"Tendering it won't make it any the less tough," gloomily returned the man who was laid off.

The two field examiners from the officers of the state board of accounts, who have been here since shortly before the first of the year, expect to complete their work within three weeks. All of the county offices have been examined and now the examiners are checking up the business of the township trustees. When this is completed the city books will be examined. The examiners, when they have completed their work, will have examined the books of every county, township and city officer in the county.

Walter G. Steele, a barber of Roachdale, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lafayette Steele of that town and Miss Ruth Pearl Lane, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Lane of Bainbridge, were married here today at 9:30 o'clock in the private office of County Clerk Harry W. Moore in the court house. Elder C. L. Airhart of this city, read the wedding ceremony. They will make their home in Roachdale where the groom is employed. Both young people are 21 years old. They are popular residents of the north part of the county.

Roy M. Brackney has filed suit in the Putnam Circuit Court asking $100 damages against the Adams Express company. The delayed shipment of a box from Greencastle to the Battle-ship Tennessee, which was stationed at Smyrna, Turkey, caused Mr. Brackney to ask for judgment. He claims that he delivered the box to the local office April 10th, 1913, and did not receive the box while in Turkey. Brackney was then in the navy and returned home some time later. The express employees traced the box and it was returned here December 23rd, 1914, according to the complaint. Brackney refused to accept the box and he claims he offered to compromise. The complaint for damages was filed in three paragraphs. Attorney Faye S. Hamilton represents the plaintiff. Brackney is the son of Dan Brackney of this town.

M. C. Edwards, of Roachdale, was in the city on business today.

Mrs. Jane Gray and Mrs. Elizabeth Corbin, of Amo, were visitors in the city today.

Mrs. Somitz and daughter, Miss Pearl, of Filmore, were in the city today.

The condition of Tom Dowling, who has been ill of pneumonia for the past few days, is much improved.

Mrs. Ben Riley, on Berry street, who suffered a severe nervous breakdown several days ago, is much improved today. Her condition has been serious.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Donner and Dr. and Mrs. O. F. Overstreet were in Indianapolis today to see "The Follies" at English's.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pratt and daughter will spend the week-end in Terre Haute. Mr. Pratt is a foreman for the Foulkes Construction Company which is putting in the new sewer system in this city.

Reports from the Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis are that Miss Maude Huestis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Huestis of this city, who recently underwent a serious operation there, is getting along nicely.

The chief-of-police came here this morning from Brazil in quest of Frank Haskett, an employee in a local cleaning and pressing establishment, who is charged with "jumping" a board bill in that town. Haskett was arrested by Marshal John Cooper, and turned over to the Brazil officer and taken to Brazil to answer to the charge. The board bill and several dollars he had borrowed amounted in all to $26.40 according to the Brazil officer. Haskett formerly resided in Brazil and came here several weeks ago and secured employment.

Attorney T. T. Moore and Matt J. Murphy went to Brazil this afternoon where they made arguments on a motion in the case of Russell Scobee against James Shonkwiler which was venued here from the Putnam Circuit Court. Mr. Moore represents the plaintiff in the case and Mr. Murphy is Shonkwiler's attorney. Scobee is asking damages for injuries he received in an automobile accident near Brick Chapel several months ago. A rig driven by Scobee was struck by an automobile driven by Shonkwiler and the former was injured.

It is probable that the selection of a baseball coach for DePauw university will be made by the Alumni Athletic Board at a meeting in Indianapolis Thursday. Reports circulated here for the past few days are to the effect that Jack Grim, last season's coach, will again be chosen to lead the Old Gold players. He is an ex-leaguer and has had much experience in the baseball world. The prospects for a winning baseball team are very bright according to the opinion of Heber H. Ellis, graduate manager of athletics.

Prof. H. A. Henderson, superintendent of the public schools of the city, addressed the Oxford club of the university in Plato hall in east college Tuesday evening. His subject, "The Common Ground Between the Church and the Schools," was very interesting and was imparted to his hearers in a very plain manner. He showed the difference between the pro-vocational schools, the regular vocational schools and the state aid vocational schools. He explained how the schools and the churches could co-operate in many ways and make both the schools and the churches bigger and better. He also mentioned the Boy Scout movement and explained how it was a common ground between the churches and the schools. Each church could have its patrol, or company of Boy Scouts, and the companies would combine for school enterprises. Fred Thrasher of the university also spoke of the Boy Scout movement and explained the Boy Scout laws. Mrs. E. B. Doll gave a very instructive talk on "Community Work and Charity." The meeting was well attended.

NOTICE TO ELECTRIC LIGHT PATRONS.

The January Electric Light bills now are ready at the Electric Light Co. office. Please call and settle. Putnam Electric Co.

John F. Cannon and Frank Cannon will see "The Follies" at English's to-night.

Fred Hixon left Tuesday for Chicago to attend the Lumberman's convention, which is in session there this week. He will remain several days.

Mrs. Sarah Taylor, 87 years old, a prominent residence of Clinton township is ill of esysipelas. She has just recuperated from an illness of pneumonia when she was taken ill the second time. Her condition is not serious.

John Bence, of near Hamrick Station, a brother of Dr. G. W. Bence, was in the city for the first time in several months today. He has been confined to his home on account of illness. He is a prominent farmer and has many friends in Greencastle.

The trustees of the State Farm met at the farm at Putnamville today for the regular monthly business session. All the members of the board were present at the meeting with the exception of Geo. Seidel, of Richmond, who was detained on account of other business engagements. Little business of any importance was transacted.

The S. C. C.'s were entertained at the home of Miss Ella Bowman on west Walnut street Tuesday evening. After the meeting, a short playlet, "On the Train to Mauro" was given by Misses Lulu Shildmyer, Ella Bowman and Ethel Daniels. The play was a comedy production and was thoroughly enjoyed. Delightful refreshments were served.

Joel T. Elliott filed suit in the Putnam Circuit Court this afternoon against William J. Elliott and others, asking judgment for $655 and the foreclosure of a mortgage on land in Marion township. The plaintiff claims that the mortgage was executed to him by the defendants, who were in business in Filmore under the name of McNary & Ruark, as security for ten notes of $50 each. He alleges the notes are due and unpaid. Attorney N. E. Elliott of Indianapolis filed the action for the plaintiff.

The Estil Tribune of Irvine, Ky., says: "Mr. J. T. Hillis says he has one well in operation on the Brinegar place in the Cow Creek field. It is pumping and showing up very well. The Hillis company expects to make application to the Standard Oil company for a pipe line as soon as the Mapel Oil company get their two wells to pumping. These wells are about ready to pump. Hillis Brothers are using an oil burner with crude oil to generate steam in a 20-horse boiler used in furnishing steam for the engine that runs the drills. It is entirely satisfactory. Owing to the present state of the roads it would be extremely difficult to haul coal for use in the oil field."

Modern Woodmen Entertain.

Modern Woodmen of America of Greencastle Camp met Tuesday night at the regular meeting and installed officers for the year 1915. Following the regular session a social time and smoker was held. Baked spiced ham, pickles, crackers, onions and coffee were served in true Woodman camp style and the eats were certainly worked on right. After the eats had been properly handled cigars were passed around and a session of the Liars' Club was held. Only two truthful men were present, James Dellen who couldn't lie and Lea Paxton, who could but wouldn't. Paxton was informed that he might see the time he would want to lie but couldn't. The club thought something of expelling him but it was decided he would lie before he left the hall or at least before the next day. He did. During an argument of a pontical nature he made the statement that he was going to vote for Hi Callender for president at the next election. Everyone knows that is a lie because Hi is under indictment and will probably be convicted for misuse of the funds of his constituents which were in his care as mayor of the strip. Another session of the Liars Club will be held sixty days later.

P. S.—The hall in which the meeting of the Liars' Club was held will easily seat two hundred (people) or liars. Come one, come all.

TWO NEW SMALLPOX CASES ARE REPORTED

Two more cases of smallpox were reported from Mt. Meridian this afternoon. The two additional victims are John Tharp and his father, who live near Mt. Meridian. The cases reported today make a total of sixteen cases now under quarantine.

Dr. Jerome King, the county health officer, went to Mt. Meridian this morning to make a further investigation in the affected district. While there he placed the new cases under quarantine regulations.

So far there have been no indications of the disease in or near to Greencastle. Dr. King stated this morning that there was no cause for any alarm here but stated that he believed it would be wise for everyone to be vaccinated as a safeguard against the disease.

OIL AT DEPTH OF 1495 FEET

DRILLERS ON THE MILLER FARM NEAR BAINBRIDGE GET GOOD SHOWING OF OIL SOON AFTER DRILL HITS TRENTON ROCK.

WILL GO MUCH DEEPER

Soon after striking Trenton Rock, the drillers who are putting down the oil well on the Miller farm struck a good showing of oil, late Tuesday afternoon. The well now shows a fair production of oil but the drillers will go still deeper in hopes of getting a big producer.

Because of a shortage of caseings the well which now is 1495 feet deep is not cased below 12 hundred feet. Casings have been ordered and should arrive here very soon. As soon as the well is cased to its entire depth the exact yield of oil can be ascertained. As it is, however, there is much water mixed with the oil and the exact production cannot be ascertained.

Those who are interested in the venture are very much encouraged and believe that a big well will be brought in after the Trenton rock is pierced. The drilling is going right along and it will not be many days before the exact value of the well will be ascertained.

Group Prayer Meetings.

Preparatory to the great revival meeting which is to begin at Locust Street Church on February 28, and is to be conducted by the Kerr Bros., prayer meetings are planned for various parts of the city.

It is the desire to have these meetings in private homes. A Prayer Circle committee has been provided whose special endeavor will be to arrange for as many prayer meetings as practicable. Invitations to any home will be gladly accepted and leaders will be secured. There is an earnest desire to enlist the cooperation and sympathy of all people who wish to see good done. If one will set aside for one hour the cares and claims of worldly interests and meet with others in the exalting services of prayer it will result in great spiritual enrichment, and the best results from the revival will be assured.

Meetings for Thursday, Feb. 11, 2:30 p. m., will be held as follows: At the home of Sister Meyers, 209 north Vine street, Sister Wolf on the corner of Olive and Indiana streets, Brother Manuel on Anderson street, and Brother Shields on Elm street. Come and bring a song book.

LOCAL MERCHANTS AND THE VISITOR MISS CONNECTIONS

While ten or fifteen Greencastle retail merchants were waiting for a representative of the Indiana Retail Merchants' Association in the Central National Bank Tuesday night, the said representative was tied up in a Monon wreck south of Greencastle.

The meeting of the merchants had resulted from telegrams sent from Indianapolis Tuesday morning requesting them to meet Tuesday night with a representative of the state association to discuss legislation affecting the retail merchants which will be before the legislature.

The meeting was called for 7:30 o'clock and after waiting until after 8 o'clock the merchants, believing that the man would not appear, left for their homes.

Shortly afterwards the man appeared but, too late. A slight accident on the Monon train from the south had delayed him just long enough to miss the meeting. C. C. Gautier entertained the visitor until his train left for Indianapolis.

The man was here to interest the local merchants in a garnishee bill which will soon be introduced in the House of Representatives.

THERE'S NEW CLOTH CALLED "TIPPERARY"

Will Be All the Rage This Spring Says Expert on Woman's Styles.

There's a new cloth called Tipperary. It will be quite the go. In a sport coat for little Mary. Or the swellest girl you know. Goodbye to tweed and homespun. Goodbye fair. There's a new cloth called Tipperary. And it's smart to wear.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Everybody is singing the praises of a new fabric for sport coats and suits called Tipperary cloth. Everybody also who is anybody when it comes to the clothes line of distinction is preparing to make herself ship-shape for spring in a coat of "dreadnaught" gray.

The answer is that it is quite the thing to name new colors, new fabrics and new models this year by some name closely allied to the Allies or at least some phase of the war.

"Triple Entente" is the striking title for one new model and "Alberte" is a fetching tribute to the Belgian king, in old blue velvet striped chiffon over an old gold slip.

STATE OFFICER IS PLEASED WITH NIGHT SCHOOLS HERE

Dr. William F. Book, deputy state superintendent of public instruction, who is in charge of the vocational educational branch of that department after visiting and hearing the recitations at the night school here Tuesday evening expressed himself as being very favorably impressed with results of the efforts of the Greencastle school authorities. He inspected both the cooking and sewing classes.

He stated that the cooking and sewing classes were both up to the standard and said that the attendance here was splendid. The schools of the east have an average of attendance of 50 per cent. of the total enrollment, but the night school attendance here averages about 80 per cent. This shows that a greater interest is taken in the work here than the schools of the eastern states. Dr. Book was pleased with the manner in which the classes were conducted here. Dr. Book says the interest of pupils and teachers in the work was plainly in evidence. He examined all the records of the work completed in the school this year.

BLOOMINGTON HAS YEAR'S WATER SUPPLY IN RESERVE

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Feb. 8.—Bloomington now has by far the greatest supply of water in its history. A report from the new $60,000 reservoir at Leonard's Mill is that water is running over the dam and is now thirty-five feet deep at the dam. The water is backing up over a territory comprising forty acres. The supply is entirely from springs. The three old lakes are also full again and it is estimated that the supply is more than enough to supply the city a year even if it never rained a drop in the meantime. The university lake also contains a large supply of water.

Try These Springs At Our Risk

Absolutely Non-Sagging and Noiseless

Wouldn't you like to awaken each morning really refreshed, with relaxed and rested muscles? Then get Perfection Bed Springs.

The spirals are supported by strong steel bands attached to heavy end springs. Whenever they are weighted beyond a given point, the steel bands assume the burden. Thus, there is no possibility of striking bottom with a noise and jar.

Perfection Springs are the only springs with a flexible chain top—the exclusive feature which has made them famous. The heavy end springs give the chains and the spirals their great flexibility and independent action. Each spring is independent of every other one. A 335 pound man and his 125 wife may sleep comfortably on the same springs.

Perfection Bed Springs do not sag nor "side-rock", are sanitary, easy to keep clean, and insure comfortable, refreshing sleep.

Try them 30 Nights at Our Risk.
